Patsey Fleetwood was discouraged and out of temper. "You may say what you please," she was saying to her sister-in law, "Rachel needs her jaws boxed, in fact half the young people of the present day ought to be put in straight jackets for awhile. In my day, young people were deferential to their elders and willing to be guided by them, but now! Why Rachel actually told me I could do as I pleased with my money, she didn't want it, and was sick and tired of hearing of it, that I had better marry David Fox myself if I wanted anybody to, and give my everlasting money to him. She didn't want to hear of it or him either again as long as she lived. That child has an awful temper, and needs looking after. You'd better send her off to school. She's doing no good here." And Aunt Patty thrust her needle into the sock she was knitting in a way that suggested temper in more than one member of the fami-

The monument has been a long time reaching completion, but it was a grand undertaking and to day standing 275 feet higher than the dome of the Country's Capitol and 45 feet higher than the hitherto unequalled Cologne Cathedral, it commemorates the memory of a man who was as much greater than all other heroes as his monument surpasses all other structures. Long live that memory and the republic he founded.

It is rare that a man grows so greatly in popular favor as President Arthur has since his call to the highest office in the nation. United States Senator-Elect from Arkansas

JAMES K. JONES.

The recently elected senator from Arkansas who is at present serving the state as a representative in congress, is a native of Mississippi, where he received a classical education. the age of 22 he entered the Confederate After the war he returned to his plantation and remained there until 1873, when he began the practice of law. When the constitutional convention was called he was a member of the state senate and was re-elected under the new constitution. In 1877 he was chosen president of the state senate. On Dec. 5, 1881, he first took his seat in the house of representatives, which he has occupied since, and where he is at present serving as a member of the ways and means committee. At the age of 46 Senator-elect Jones, who, by the way, will constitute the third Jones in the senate, is a man of ideas and well qualified for the great trust he is honored with.

Chief of the Woman's Department at the

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE. The chief of the department of woman' work at the World's exposition at New Orleans is Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who is ad mirably qualified for the arduous duties of so trying a position. She is descended from one of the old families of New York, and was married in 1843 to the celebrated abolitionis! and philanthropist, the late Dr. Samuel S Ine marris took place in he father's residence, the Ward mansion, one of of the historic houses of Broadway, New York, which has since made way for busines blocks. Mrs. Howe has traveled extensively was one of the earliest woman suffragists and abolitionists; is a fine speaker, and at present chief editor of The Woman's Journal. greatest poem of the war was written by Mrs Howe, under the title of "The Battle Hymi of the Republic," the last stanza of which

"In the beauty of lilies Christ was born across the sea. With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me;

As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free, While God is marching on."

PENJAMIN F. JONAS.

Among the prominent southerners in the United States senate whose names appear in cabinet that of Benjamin F. Johas is quite frequently mentioned. Senator Johas is a ntucky, where he was born in 1835 child be was taken with his Illinois, where he received his education. Returning south, at the age of 19 he settled in New Orleans, studied law, and was admitted to practice there. During the war be served in the Confederate artiflery corps. and immediately after the war he was elected a member of the Louisiann legislature. This was the beginning of an active political career, which he has followed with but slight interruption since, baving served in both branches of the Louisiana legislature, Lesider being for four years the city attorney for New Orleans. He has been a prominent figure at Democratic national conventions and is at present a member of the Democratic sational committee.

ROBERT C. WINTROP.

When the cornerstone of the Washington monument was laid, on July 4, 1848, in the presence of President Polk, the vice-president, members of the cabinet, senators, representatives, and a host of other persons, Robert C. Winthrop, then speaker of the house of rep resentatives, delivered the oration. It would have been a most happy and appropriate event if, after an interval of nearly 37 years, now that the noble shaft, capped and completed, stands against the sky, the inaugural address in honor of the consummation of the work, on Washington's birthday anniversary, could have been made by the same and now venerable orator. This was, for a time, confidently expected; but illness has intervened, and it has been decided that the oration pre-pared by Mr. Winthrop shall be read by the Hon. John D. Long, a representative from Massachusetts, in the presence of the president and cabinet, judges of the supreme court and the members of both houses of congress assembled in the hall of the house of representatives.

Mr. Winthrop was a cotemporary with Daniel Webster, having studied law under the latter. He is a lineal descendant in the sixth generation of the first pilgrim governor of Massachusetts. In politics he represented his district in the Massachusetts legislature from 1835 to 1840, when he was elected to congress, remaining there until 1850, when he was chosen to succeed Daniel Webster in the senate, the latter having accepted a place in President Fillmore's cabinet. After 1851 his political career ended, and he devoted himself to pursuing literary, archæological and charitable employments, having for years been president of the Massachusetts Historical society. He has also published several vol umes of a historical and biographical nature.

COL. THOMAS L. CASEY. To the energy and skill of Col. Thomas Lincoln Casey is due, more than any individual, the stupendous undertaking of the completion of the Washington monument in six years without any delay and without the loss of a single life. In 1878 Col. Casey was chosen by the joint high commission to prepare a project for the completion of the mon-On the acceptance of his plan he immediately set to work and has since been piling up blocks of stone to a height heretofore unaccomplished in the history of architecture. In six years he has added 380 feet of masonry, making the total height of the shaft, above its base, 555 feet.

Col. Casey was born in Madison Bar racks, Sacketts Harbor, N.Y., in 1831. His family, on both the paternal and maternal sides, have been active and respected citizens of Rhode Island since the middle of the seven teenth century. Graduating from West Point be entered the Ordnance Bureau as instructor of engineering at the Military Academy. During the late "unpleasantness" he was mainly employed in charge of the construc-tion of fortifications on the coast of Maine and New Hampshire.

His present duties relate to the construc tion of the buildings for the state, war and navy departments, of the improvements over the grave of Thomas Jefferson, at Monticello Va., of the erection of a monument at Washington's headquarters at Newburg, N. Y. and of the erection of a monument to mark the hirthplace of George Washington. Col. Casey is a genealogist of note, and a gentleman of fine literary tastes and acquirements.

HERNANDO DE SOTO MONEY. In several of the lists of cabinet possibilities "going the rounds" in anticipation of President-elect Cleveland's announcement of his choice, is found the name of Hernando De Soto Money as the coming postmaster-general, which renders his portrait of interest interest interest in attest that his stories have to be cut into ties "going the rounds" in anticipation of just now. Mr. Money was born in Missis sippi in 1839, and received a university edu cation prior to pursuing his law studies. is an editor by profession, and has wielded powerful influence in the politics of his state. He was elected to the Forty-fourth congress, taking his seat in 1875, and has been centinu ously re-elected since.

How the Shell Acted

[Detroit Free Press] In going over the battlefield of Malvert Hill we came across one of the monster shells thrown from gunboats in Turkey Bend. At hour later, in going up the Varnum road, we met four colored men driving a mule and cart and told them of the location of the relic. They hurried off to get it, and we went into the national cemetery. Just as the party were ready to return to Richmond the nule belonging to the colored gang came clattering past, having the thills dragging behind him. He was pretty closely followed by one of the negroes, who went by us at a 2:40 gait and would not stop to answer ques tions. In about five minutes a second one came up, hat off and face covered with blood As he stopped to pant he was asked what had happened.
